THE YANKEE CLIPPER

Protect Your Home
From FireBy RUTH WHALEY

Many disastrous winter fires would be avoided if home owners checked, cleaned and repaired, heating equipment carefully in the fall.

In grandmother's day fall house cleaning usually started with the stoves. The big living room stove was given its annual blacking and polishing. Before the first fire was built, the chimney and stove pipe were thoroughly cleaned.

It's still a good idea to start fall cleaning with the heating equipment. Get this cleaning done before snappy fall days call for heat in the house. Check all fireplaces, flues and chimneys to be sure they are sound and in good repair. Roof fires are caused mostly by sparks leaking out through cracks in the chimney. Remember that in a few years mortar can dry out and crumble and that in time bricks may loosen. Before fires are started in the fall, all chimney cracks should be cemented.

Then, make sure stoves, furnaces and other heating equipment are in good condition to operate safely. Stove pipe should be checked for rust holes and worn spots. Make sure all joints fit snugly. If your roof needs to be fixed, tend to it without delay. If it needs replacement, make the new one fire resistant.

Don't put off this job tomorrow, do it now!

State Farm Prices Decline Expected

Further declines in farm prices must be expected, according to Canada Packers Limited.

"The peak of prices in Canada and U.S.A. has admittedly been passed," the annual report of the company, covering the fiscal year, declares in dealing with prospects for the coming year. "It would seem that further declines are imminent, except for the delaying influence of government support policies."

It was by no means certain that the U.S.A. could carry indefinitely the burden of farm support on the scale involved in present legislation. Decline in American prices would be reflected in Canada.

"Up to now, because of resilient national revenues, these supports have not imposed a heavy burden.

General Motors Open Edmonton Warehouse

The motoring public in general—and owners of General Motors products in particular—will be interested in the announcement by General Motors of the opening of a new warehouse in Edmonton for the distribution of factory approved parts and accessories to General Motors dealers in the Northern Alberta and Peace River districts.

E. J. Humphrey, Director of Sales, General Motors Products of Canada Limited, said in making the announcement, that the opening of this warehouse in Edmonton is another important step in General Motors' aim to give prompt and efficient service to owners of General Motors vehicles through General Motors dealers located in this area. The many thousands of owners of GM cars and trucks now serviced in this area will benefit from this new point of distribution, Mr. Humphrey said. The new warehouse has the more up-to-date bin and stock-handling equipment, and a very wide variety of parts and accessories will be available for current and past models of GM cars and trucks.

The single-story building, with over 20,000 square feet of floor space, is located at 10282 108 street at the corner of 107 avenue.

The key personnel in charge of the warehouse includes Leonard L. Slimon, warehouse manager, Morley R. Swanson, superintendent of inventory; Arthur M. Fouck, order superintendent, and Gerald E. Howey, stock-room foreman. All of these men have had wide experience in the positions in which they are now placed to serve you through your local GM dealers.

But national revenues are shrinking and the sums involved in the support policies are increasing."

Opera Tenor Does
Sing in His Bath

By JAY LLOYD

My first assignment as a working newspaperman was an interview with an opera singer.

For the first time (and only occasion since) I tried to write the story in advance in my mind, a fairly common stunt with some news writers.

To give some indication of just how long ago it was, at the time "Singing in the Rain" was the current popular song hit.

BATHING TENOR

Now I had always been curious about whether or not opera singers sang in their bath. When I asked the question did the particular Italian canary I was interviewing do so, instead of getting a blank look from his manager, his face lit up, and he told me that just a few moments before I arrived his protegee had been singing in the shower and the hotel staff had gathered outside the door to listen.

This seemed so much in line with my "manufactured" story that I thought the manager (who really gave the interview, as the Italian spoke only a few words of English) had made it up. Checking with the hotel staff on the floor, however, I found out it was true.

I don't know what I would have done for a story if it hadn't been for this happy inspiration, for, try as he would, the manager could not think of anything newsworthy about his tenor. And certainly he should have been able to do so, for until a matter of days before he had been Erlanger's business manager.

That should have been the story; because, next to Erlanger himself, he was about the longest wanted man (or more correctly, "bitch") the U.S.A. at the time. Those whose memories have sufficient depth may remember that the theatre magnate when he ran afoul of the law on a morals charge skipped the country. The manager was wanted as a witness. WASTED TIME

Meanwhile he was trying to make an honest living by promoting a few theatrical ventures in Canada. I think he picked the tenor fresh off a boat from Italy. Those who heard the concert (I was not among them) expressed the opinion his transoceanic trip

Answer to this

Puzzle next

Week

was a waste of time.

The singing-in-the-tub routine got me in hot water (Is there any cure for punning?) with another opera star.

I had asked so many questions of Matzenauer (known as "the war horse of the Metropolitan" because of her ability to take so many different parts) that I said to her jokingly that "pretty soon I would be reduced to asking her if she sang in her bath." She terminated the interview in a hurry. Some time later I learned from a colleague, who saw her subsequently when she commented on the incident, that she thought I was reflecting on her personal habits!

Probably what makes the incident stand out in the mind more than anything else—even more than the fact that it was my first assignment—is that the Managing Editor thought the story so bright and unusual that for the next 12 years I did all interviews for the paper!

SPECIALIST

A newspaperman who really specialized in interviews was the late Bob Knowles of the Toronto Star.

To my way of thinking, Knowles had "T" trouble. Many interviews would probably be much more interesting if they were written in the first person singular. But Knowles not only started out each story with the ninth letter of the alphabet capitalized, but also was more interested in his opinions of the man than he was in the man's own opinion.

This led one world-famous man to remark:

"When I was in Toronto I had the privilege of interviewing Mr. Knowles of the Toronto Star."

Yet my personal contact with Mr. Knowles taught me a lesson which possibly he did not intend

AND PEACE BE WITH YOU ALWAYS

Are ideological or economic causes the main threat to world peace? Probably a combination of both, with a little extra added, which could best be summarized as national ambitions.

Members of the Canadian forces overseas who recall how much they resented being called "colonials" will have little difficulty understanding how Germans, defeated in two world wars, feel about their national pride.

Nations, like individuals, need to prove their ego. Persons who recently lived in Europe invariably remark: "Communism doesn't scare me much but Russian imperialism frightens me to death."

With the two great nations of the European continent, on one hand is wounded pride, and on the other, national ambitions. Russia's whole policy toward Germany has been to capitalize on her nationalism without courting the danger of setting her up as a rival.

Russia feels that if she can win Germany she can conquer Europe and thus the world.

If the threat were ideological only, determination by each nation of its own form of government would suit the west, for self-determinism is a democratic principle. Since its inception, however, Communism has thought in terms of world revolution, and even if Russia did agree not to interfere in domestic affairs of other countries, the west would always suspect (with reason) that she was secretly plotting to bind the world to Communism.

As a Socialist, Sir Stafford Cripps once plotted the whole modern method of Communist political conquest.

Asked why he was not a Communist, he said anyone in England who believed in revolution was a fool, when the powers-that-be had control of army, navy and police forces. The socialists would gain administration of government and thus the full means of control.

Russia would prefer to burrow from within but it must be to come within this generation it must be by force of arms.

As for the economic factor, no nation has proceeded more than a step beyond the idea that trade follows the flag.

The quarrel between Allied authorities in Germany over devaluation of the mark indicated that each nation was looking after its own commercial interests. France and Britain feared German competition in export markets; whereas the U.S. wanted to give Germany a fair chance at world markets because the U.S. foots the bill for excess of imports over exports.

No, economic-nationalism is not a thing of the past, but whether world trade may be integrated to the general benefit of the world, and without conflict, remains to be determined. It is a long pathway in world co-operation still to be explored.

Overlooked in the news of Russian possession of the A-bomb was the announcement that the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization intended to set up a fund to buy surpluses from "have" nations to sell to have-no-dollar nations in their own currency. The organization would thus become an international clearing house and it is claimed that the funds necessary would not be in excess of the cost to the United States alone of storing or destroying surpluses in a depression. This is a move which might go a long way in attenuating a depression as well as making purchases easier for backward countries.

But over all falls the shadow of national aspirations. It is not only a question of language and character but of pride. The Atlantic Treaty and the steps to a Parliament of Europe taken at Strasbourg may be moving thoughts in the right direction of the essential unity of the human race.

To reach that unity, and abiding peace, world statesmen will need not only wisdom and courage but tolerance for the grave days which lie ahead until the world is truly one.

SMALL TOWNS WILL DECIDE

"It's my belief that the battle for democracy in this country will be won or lost in our small towns. As I see it, at no time in our history has there been so great a challenge to our freedom as today, and I think this freedom can best be preserved by a hard-hitting democracy functioning effectively at the local level."—Billy Rose.

One of the first things she learns when she leaves school is how to get into the good books of a man so that he will carry HER.

Dear Editor

MAN, MONKEYS, MILK

I have read with great interest Mr. Pue's article on evolution and Mr. Jones' letter to the editor.

Those who disagree with the evolution theory seem to want a theory of their own to confirm their beliefs. Theories of Darwin and Mendel are denounced alike by Mr. Pue, Mr. Jones, and Mr. Joe Stalin.

Human knowledge is like a partly filled milk picher. The milk is knowledge; the empty space above the milk the unknown. The human mind refuses to accept the principle of empty space, and like the air in the pitcher religious beliefs, as substitutes for knowledge, can expand or contract at will of the elements.

With primitive people the level of the milk is low; the air content high. If the savage has a pain in his abdomen he blames it on a religious spirit; whereas you and I know it might be appendicitis but even an atheistic surgeon could cure. The jungle dweller's first glimpse of an airplane convinces him of supernatural power in evidence; we understand the machines as man made.

I could go on indefinitely citing examples of phenomena that cannot be explained by man on a certain cultural level and therefore are believed to be manifestations of the divine will, while man on a higher level of knowledge can explain them very easily. I therefore tend to see why we should accept wild hypotheses dreamt up by some medicine man in the distant past rather than the findings of disinterested scientists as explanations of many problems. Also there is nothing wrong with saying: "I do not know" in the case of problems that have not yet been solved by science, certainly it is more honest than to give explanations that involve witchcraft, supernatural powers or what have you. As long as we make an honest effort to discover by unbiased minds the truth behind that which is unknown to us today, we cannot go wrong. As soon as we accept an unverified explanation from anybody and substitute belief for knowledge or the admitted lack of knowledge, we are the dupes of the people that rule by exploiting and fostering our ignorance. Even if scientific proof did not exist for the theory of evolution, the fact that both Stalin and the church reject Darwin, would show to me that he must be right.

By rejecting evolution you only prove what you set out to disprove: That man's thinking apparatus is a product of evolution and that evolution has not progressed far enough in their case to let them understand what Darwin discovered 90 years ago.

It would be very interesting to go into this subject further to make a historical analysis showing the times of unquestioned acceptance of religious teachings in different parts of the world and the effect of this on the progress of man's knowledge or we could analyze the picture in a philosophical way and show the fundamental difference between the way that the nonhuman part of the universe is

WE HAVE NO CHOICE

Announcement that Russia has the atom bomb and V-2 rocket bases ringing Europe brought more editorial comment than anything since the atom bomb itself. Nearly all discussed two alternatives:

1. Either there will be atomic war with Russia;
2. Or there must be international control of atomic weapons.

Nearly all, however, missed one vital point. They inferred that we could CHOOSE between these alternatives. Actually, as an editorial in the "Washington (D. C.) Sunday Star" points out, "choice is severely limited." Control depends, not on us, but on Russia's willingness to submit to international inspection of which there seems to be small hope.

It may be, as the Kremlin claims, that they do not trust us. But it is clear they do not LIKE us.

The Russians, therefore, will hold to their own aims, refusing all controls that might obstruct them UNLESS some other nation finds and follows out an aim fulfilling all the deepest aspirations of the Russian people in a way the Marxist ideology can't even promise.

This is actually the only way the western world could ever end the overarching threat of devastation. But is it realistic? Is it possible? Do we still have a chance?

Not without vast underlying change in our existing outlook.

In the same edition of the "Washington Star," the Chairman of the U. S. Senate points out that sane alternatives to atomic warfare, "Namely, just adjustments of the differences dividing mankind, cannot be chosen unless men and nations change."

Yet this is possible, he says. At Caux, Switzerland, there are earnest men and women "above political, diplomatic and economic levels... frankly facing the fundamental necessity—change, changed hearts, changed desires, changed attitudes, changed objectives..."

Jack Jones, steel worker from Wales and a communist for 28 years, addressing the World Conference at Caux, has stated, "Unless you change as managers you won't have an industry in three years. And unless we change as workers we won't have our freedom in three years."

Something fishy there.

Some public speakers get by because no one in the crowd knows anything about the subject, either.

1st St. Albert Troop Boy Scout News

ST. ALBERT.—Father Magnan recently was invested as Assistant Scoutmaster to replace Father Gaudet who we were all sorry to lose.

Troop strength is now up to 18 scouts with new recruits Lawrence Wakefield, Roy Sylyski who moved here from Morinville and Ben Hinich who comes from Volmer for the meeting. Fourteen of the boys have successfully passed their Tenderfoot tests and four of them have completed all but two of their Second Class tests. These tests include such as First Aid, Signaling, Observation Tests, Recognition of Native woods, Fire-Lighting and Cooking, Knowledge of the Compass, Advanced knots such as Lashings and Hitches, Knowledge of the Axe and Knife and proper uses. Participation in three organized hikes.

The boys are organized in three patrols: Eagles under Patrol Leader Rene Morin, Crows under P.L. Rene Brodeur and Wolves under P.L. Wilfred Perrault. At present the Honor Penant is held by the Wolf patrol for obtaining the most points in competition, with points awarded or deducted for such as attendance, promptness, behavior at meetings, competitive games, personal inspection, etc.

On Oct 11 the Scouts hiked up the river west of town for a distance where those present passed their cooking test and fire-lighting test. On Oct 22 the troop went to the railroad in Edmonton to meet the Chief Commissioner, Major-General Spry at a meeting in the afternoon of the same day the pack of Cubs met him along with about 300 Cubs from Edmonton in the Prince of Wales Armories at a Wolf Cub rally. The evening previous the group committee met Major-Gen. Spry at a meeting in the Holy Trinity Church in Edmonton.

The Group Committee consisting of E. Maheux, Mrs. Lamer, Mrs. Sumner, Mrs. Vague, Ben Morin, A. J. Kennedy and F. L. Atkins are to be congratulated on the very keen interest that they show in Scouting and with-out their ardent support the movement would not be as successful here as it is. They hold regular meetings every month and are continually planning some new activity for the financing of the Troop and Pack and in order to have a summer camp next year.

The keenness shown by the boys is very gratifying to the leaders who are donating their time once every week for meetings and more often for other activities. There are cases of tardiness, however, and an appeal is here made to the parents to see that their boys attend regularly and promptly. Cubs every Monday and Scouts every Thursday in the Parish hall. There are some boys who have not yet joined and the parents of these boys are requested to have them take advantage of the excellent training offered. This is not only a local enterprise as there are 110,000 Scouts and Cubs in Canada and over 5,000,000 in 44 different countries in the world.

If there are any local services which can be carried out by the Scouts they are only too happy to do so. At present they are ushering at the picture shows and a decided decrease in noise and commotion has been evident. All individuals and organizations should feel free to call on them at all times to "Do Their Good Turn Daily."

Councillors present were T. W. Rowsaw, Joe McLean, Clive Potter, Henry Stack and Steve Radomski.

There were only 813 commercial failures in Canada in 1948.

Murder Evidence Begins To Pile Up

Sixth installment of the "Strangest Murder Case on Record," appears on Page 1 of the edition. If you wish back copies of this interesting series, please contact your local editor.

Evidence of Walter Humphrey opened the first Paris trial and it looked bad for him as a prosecution of witnesses corroborated Humphrey's evidence.

THE BORROWED BOAT
Mrs. Frank Craft remembered Humphrey borrowing her boat on Aug. 3 to row Paris across the river. Mrs. Craft remembered Humphrey borrowing her boat on Aug. 3 to row Paris across the river. Mrs. Craft remembered Humphrey borrowing her boat on Aug. 3 to row Paris across the river.

Paris and Humphrey lived. She saw Paris in the boat. She remembered the day because it was her son's birthday.

Ernest Campbell saw Paris on the 3rd, having put a new bandage on a boil on Paris' arm. William Sweet said he rowed Paris back from Riverview Park on the 3rd. Stanley Humphrey and John Best saw Paris across the river with Walter Humphrey on the 3rd, and saw Humphrey row back after talking to Paris for five minutes on the shore.

PLACES PARIS ON SCENE
If their evidence was to be accepted it placed Paris near the scene of the murder a few hours after it was believed to have occurred.

In addition to Walter Humphrey, Alfred Byers said he saw Paris the night of the murder, placing the Aug. 2 date by the Cushing Fire, an event from which most of the residents authenticated their dates. Moreover, if their evidence was accepted, Paris' alibi of being in Truro on those dates was obviously wrong.

DID HATTIE IDENTIFY?

Even more damaging would have been Hattie Labigne's identification of Paris as the man which whom Sadie went into the bush.

When Paris was arrested he was in the process of growing a moustache. When asked if she could identify Paris, Hattie said: "Yes, he looks like the man, only his moustache makes him look different." That was her answer when she saw Paris on Aug. 19 when he was arrested and that was her answer, the from varying only slightly, throughout the trials.

When Paris took the stand in his own defence, he asserted that Hattie Lavigne had not identified him when she saw him after his arrest. In the second trial, Hattie testified the day he was arrested she said Paris was the same size but his moustache made him look different. Paris promptly declared she had refused to identify him when he came to the stand again.

The point was not cleared up until the fourth trial when the Crown showed that Hattie had positively identified Paris after his arrest.

Let's Eat
BY
IDA BAILEY ALLEN

The chef tilted back his high bonnet, obviously preparing for an important announcement.

"Madame," he observed, "one of the best ideas for eating better on less money is 'la soupe.' Without a repertoire of varied and substantial soups, the food budget is what you call 'lunked.' When the table money is limited, the clever lady of the house can make the soup so substantial that not so much expensive food will be needed for the main course."

Cabbage Soup

For instance she can make a cabbage soup like we have in our menu today, and fortify it with some sliced frankfurters which gives a tasty flavor. Or she can make a thick vegetable soup and add cooked dried or canned beans of any kind, as in minestrone. Or she can make a soup of chopped spinach and broth and serve with grated cheese on top."

"Of course, chef, very few homemakers make bouillon or consommé; they use the canned variety. But canned soups may be fortified too. Canned consommé with small balls of rice and chopped left-over meat poached in it is substantialized. Canned condensed tomato soup diluted with vegetable liquid and garnished with sliced cooked celery and a topping of sour cream, becomes a satisfying first course. And canned vegetable soup is good diluted with liquid from boiled potatoes, then topped with crisp croutons and grated cheese."

Homemade Soups

"It is a fact, madame, that the cost of excellent homemade soups is almost unnoticeable in the food budget. In France we make wonderful soups from elements which many homemakers in this country neglect to use. First of all we demand the bones the butcher cuts from the meat, and I mean all kinds of bones—from the pork, the veal, the lamb, from the beef, the mutton. We use the neck and the feet of the poultry. Cooked carefully with a few inexpensive vegetables you have soup of a flavor superb. With a good bread, a salad and some fruit and cheese, you can even do without a main course."

Cabbage and Frankfurter Soup

Heat 2 tbsp. butter, margarine or bacon dripping. Add 2 large chopped peeled onions and 1 pt. finely-chopped cabbage (or use left-over cooked cabbage). Fry gently until light brown. Then stir in 3 tbsp. enriched flour and 1/2 tsp. minced parsley. Add 5 c. soup stock or water drained from cooked vegetables, plus 2 bouillon cubes or 2 envelopes broth powder. Cover and simmer 1 hr. Add 2 sliced skinless frankfurters. Season to taste with salt, pepper and 1 tsp. tarragon or plain vinegar.

Baked Fish with Herb Sauce

Order a 2 to 3 lb. fish dressed for baking. Cod, haddock, catfish and whitefish are in good supply according to locality. Wash thoroughly, drain, dust with salt and pepper and fill sparingly with a good bread stuffing, then fold together (do not "sew up"). Grab the skin along the back so it will not crack in cooking. Transfer the fish to a well-oiled baking pan. Dot with butter, margarine or shortening, and place in a moderate oven, 350 F. When the skin begins to turn color, add 1/2 c. water to the pan. Baste occasionally with this liquid. Bake until the fish begins to separate from the bones, about 40 min.; allow 15 min. to the pound. Prepare herb sauce and serve separately.

Herb Sauce

Melt 2 tbsp. butter or margarine in a small sauce pan and stir in 2 tbsp. enriched flour. When blended, add 1 tbsp. lemon juice, 1/2 tsp. salt, 1/4 tsp. paprika, 1/4 tsp. granulated sugar, 1/4 c. boiling water or liquid drained from cooked potatoes, and 1 tsp. each minced fresh tarragon, parsley, basil or dill, or use 1/4 tsp. each if the herbs are dried. Then simmer 5 min.

Upside Down Filbert Cake

Cream together 3 tbsp. butter or margarine, 1/4 c. softened brown sugar and 2 tbsp. flour. Then work in 1/4 c. chopped blanched filberts, chopped quite fine. Oil an 8" cake pan and spread this mixture in the bottom. Make cake batter from a package of plain cake mix or by a home recipe, and spoon into the pan. Bake about 35 min. at 350-375 F. Cool 5 min. Turn upside down and serve cold.

Trick of the Chef

For an extra flavor in mashed potatoes add 1/4 c. sautéed, finely-chopped onions and beat well.

MEMORIAL TO R.C.A.C. WAR DEAD UNVEILED AT CAMP BORDEN

A field-stone memorial to members of the Royal Canadian Armored Corps who fell in World War II was unveiled recently by General Sir Richard McCreery at the R.C.A.C. school in Camp Borden, Ont. Gen. McCreery, who was chief of staff to Viscount Alexander and commander of the British army on the Rhine, was guest of honor and guest speaker at the annual R.C.A.C. association dinner held in the camp. Here he is shown during the unveiling ceremony.

Opera Tenor Does Sing In His Bath

but of which my then-mentor took full advantage.

Late one Saturday morning Mr. Knowles came storming into the editor's office of the Charlotte-town "Patriot" as if he were Hitler visiting some Nazi outpost with a hot speech burning his lips for prompt utterance before a properly adulating audience (to use a metaphor in advance of its time).

It so happened that the late Fred Nash, owner-editor, was absent that day and I was occupying the editor's chair.

INTERVIEWER INTERVIEWED
He announced himself as "Knowles of the Star." To preserve the aroma of the country bumpkin, which he apparently thought I was, I asked him what "Star." This shook him so much that, after explaining "Toronto, of course," he asked me point-blank if I did not want an interview. I said: "No, thanks, the paper has gone to press."

The following Monday morning the rival newspaper came out with a front page story "Interviewer Interviewed." As this was a cute little heading (unusual for our rival!) I was annoyed I hadn't thought of it myself.

Mr. Nash was even more annoyed with me.

"When you are writing an editorial be as bigoted as you please. But never let your personal prejudice interfere with your news sense," he said.

It was good advice. I have tried to follow it since.

U.S. APOLOGIZES TO U. OF T. CO-ED

Ruth Comfort, 21-year-old University of Toronto co-ed, was detained by U.S. immigration authorities for 24 hours on her return from Holland on a student tour. Her detention on Ellis Island, New York, brought a protest by Canadian Ambassador Hume Wrong and an apology from the U.S. State department. Miss Comfort says that from the questions asked of her, immigration men thought she was a Communist.

High Return To Farmers

Farmers received 84.7 cents for each dollar of sales for livestock products and 90.14 for other farm products during 1949. This constitutes "a new and remarkable record," according to Canada Packers Limited.

Low cost of processing and the extremely high range of prices for farm products were the main reason.
